While sailing among the groups of islands at the entrance of the Gulf of Pecbeli, Mr. Adams bad an adventure which is worth recording, if only so an illustration of optical delusion. which might have become a source of error. A long, dark object, apparently an enormous make, was seen in the distance, working its way vigorously against the tide by lateral undulawith sailors burning for the encounter, was, in the huguage of une of our popular novelists, the work of an instant. But, alse! on a closer inspection, the supposed sea-mounter turned out to be only a "long, dark root of a tree, gnarled

Why certain lots have the minimum price marked against them, while others are not so distinguished, may well puzzle an outsider; but if you were to question one of the initiated on the subject he might perhaps tell you something about ad valorem duties. Certain goods, he might tell you, pay a duty proportioned to their value—that this value is declared by the importer, whose interest it is to place it as low as he besdache, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Side, can; but if, with the intention of evading a part of the duty, he places it too low, the

by his knavery.-Leisure Hour Ropping Time. I cannot help rejoicing when hopping time comes round. The poorest poor of East. end and South London slums then get their one real boliday, and, whilst they take it, guin not only health, but unwonted wages also. Their lodging, rough as it generally is, is human help. The point of great importance, probably not worse, either physically or morally; then, is to obtain the proper remedy—somethan what the bulk of them have been accustomed to "at home." If they did not go into the country they could not escape, poor creatures, from defiting eights and sounds; and, in the health it is intended to restore. There is such country, there is just a chauce that Nature's teaching may tell upon them in some slight degree. At noy rate, for a week or two, they most delicate, yet powerful enough for the do it in. It is not claimed that they exercise lines of borels, bedded with straw, in each of which a dozen and more of men, women, and children." house" like pigs. Anyhow, the night air of the line of walled and latticed off compartments must almost necessarily be foul, but their miscellaneous tenants make it fouler by blocking up, to the best of their ability, the means of ventilation provided. The poor How different are accustomed to foul air at night; and delicate a good many of them, no doubt, have often felt cold air blewing over them at night; but that experience is clustered around with so many dreary associations, that, when they can get the chance, they like to be warm at night, at any cost. Some hope growers house their pickers in tents, some in extemporised structures of straw-thatched hurdle, some in the outbuildings of their farmsteads—the last not always taking proper care that the cattle-sheds are decently cleansed before their human cattle are turned into them. Common cooking-places are erected outside the barracks of all sorts.
